

Personal Perspectives of PASCAL

PASCAL is a distributed institute – an institute without walls that spans many countries. It works because, despite their differences in culture, experience and research, the members of PASCAL form a community. This community is made from individuals who visit, challenge, educate, brainstorm and support each other. It is also an open community, excited to welcome new members. In this section, we hear the personal perspectives of some of the members of PASCAL, in their own words.
